

CONTENTS

ARTICLES

The Morality of Terrorism -----	John Harris	1
Empiricism and Racism -----	Martin Barker	6
Materialism, Realism and the Reflection Theory -----	Sean Sayers	16
A Critical Note on Bhaskar and Systems Theory -----	G. Carchedi	27

REVIEWS

Soper, On Human Needs -----	Martin Barker	31
Wood, Karl Marx -----	William H. Shaw	34
Callinicos, Is there a Future for Marxism? -----	Howard Feather	35
Graham, Contemporary Political Philosophy -----	Peter Vipond	37
Mephram and Ruben, Issues in Marxist Philosophy vol.IV -----	C.J. Arthur	39
Geoghegan, Reason and Eros -----	Steve Crook	41
Barnes, J.S. Kuhn and Social Science -----	Mike Shortland	44
Cowen, The Crisis in Urban Planning -----	Allan Cochrane	45
Bottomore, Modern Interpretations of Marxism -----	C.J. Arthur	45
Rockmore, Marxism & Alternatives -----	Howard Feather	45

NEWS

RP day school on dialectic -----	Chris Arthur	46
Hegel conference -----	Joe McCarney	46
State of literary theory -----	Stuart Sim	46

LETTERS

Heidegger Against Nazism -----	Richard Kearney	47
--------------------------------	-----------------	----

---

INDEX OF OUR FIRST TEN YEARS

In RP31 there appeared a cumulative index of articles, reviews and other pieces published in Radical Philosophy from issue No.1 to issue No.30. Further copies are available, free of charge, for those considering purchasing back numbers. Please write to: Mike Shortland, Department of History and Philosophy of Science, University of Leeds, LS6 9JT

---

RADICAL PHILOSOPHY GROUP

The Radical Philosophy Group grew out of a convergence of two currents which had been largely formed by the student movement of the 1960s - on the one hand, discontent, especially among students, with the sterile and compacent philosophy taught in British universities and colleges; on the other hand, a revival of interest in the theoretical work of the left and a recognition of the need to confront the ideology enshrined in orthodox academic disciplines. The Radical Philosophy Group has always contended that these two problems can be tackled together - that philosophical inquiry into fundamental issues must lead to the exposure of conservatism masquerading as formal reason.

Academic philosophy in this country has generally accepted and defended the frame of reference of the dominant bourgeois culture. This culture is supported and mirrored by the élitist isolation, the internal hierarchies and demarcations, of academic institutions. The Radical Philosophy Group therefore works for reforms in courses and assessments for the enlargement of students' control over their education, for the breaking down of barriers between philosophy and other disciplines and between academic institutions and the outside world.

The Group has held numerous conferences, and local groups have been formed which have organised meetings and agitated on local issues. Radical Philosophy is the magazine of the Radical Philosophy Group, and has come out three times a year since January 1972. It aims to criticise the current state of philosophy in the English-speaking world and to encourage philosophical discussion on the left. It welcomes any contributions which will serve these aims.