

CONTENTS

EDITORIAL	Noel Parker	1
ARTICLES
Who Made the French Revolution?: An Essay on Current Historiography	Noel Parker	2
Mary Wollstonecraft and the Tensions in Feminist Philosophy	Jean Grimshaw	11
Hegel and the French Revolution	Chris Arthur	18
Labour and Labour-Power	Ian Hunt	22
Nietzsche, Ethics & Sexual Difference	Rosalyn Diprose	27
Knowledge as a Social Phenomenon	Sean Sayers	34
REVIEWS
Carole Pateman, The Sexual Contract	Anne Phillips	38
Richard Dien Winfield, The Just Economy	Robert Stern	40
William Connolly, Political Theory and Modernity	Andy Dobson	42
Paul Ricoeur, Time and Narrative, Volume III	Jonathan Rée	43
Graham McCann, Marilyn Monroe	Howard Feather	43
Andrew Brennan, Thinking about Nature: an investigation of nature, value and ecology	Andy Dobson	44
H. Tudor and J. M. Tudor (eds), Marxism and Social Democracy: The Revisionist Debate, 1896-1898
David Forgacs, A Gramsci Reader: Selected Writings 1916-1935	Peter Osborne	45
Richard Bernstein, Philosophical Essays in a Pragmatic Mode	John Gibbins	45
Christina Howells, Sartre: The Necessity of Freedom	Andy Dobson	46
M. C. Taylor (ed), Deconstruction in Context	Andy Dobson	46
SHORT REVIEWS		47
NEWS		49

RADICAL PHILOSOPHY GROUP

The Radical Philosophy Group grew out of a convergence of two currents which had been largely formed by the student movement of the 1960s - on the one hand, discontent, especially among students, with the sterile and complacent philosophy taught in British universities and colleges; on the other hand, a revival of interest in the theoretical work of the left and a recognition of the need to confront the ideology enshrined in orthodox academic disciplines. The Radical Philosophy Group has always contended that these two problems can be tackled together - that philosophical inquiry into fundamental issues must lead to the exposure of conservatism masquerading as formal reason.

Academic philosophy in this country has generally accepted and defended the frame of reference of the dominant bourgeois culture. This culture is supported and mirrored by the élitist isolation, the internal hierarchies and demarcations, of academic institutions. The Radical Philosophy Group therefore works for reforms in courses and assessments for the enlargement of student's control over their education, for the breaking down of barriers between philosophy and other disciplines and between academic institutions and the outside world.

The Group has held numerous conferences and local groups have been formed which have organised meetings and agitated on local issues. Radical Philosophy is the magazine of the Radical Philosophy Group, and has come out three times a year since January 1972. It aims to criticise the current state of philosophy in the English-speaking world and to encourage philosophical discussion on the left. It welcomes any contributions which will serve these aims.